Headline:
Largely dry, bright and cold today.

Today:
After a cold and frosty start it will be largely dry with bright or sunny spells throughout the day. Feeling cold, especially as the southeasterly breeze picks up during the afternoon. Cloud will increase across the far south later. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Tonight:
It will be turning increasingly cloudy with some outbreaks of light rain and drizzle at times, overnight. Less cold compared to previous nights and largely frost-free. Breezy too. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Monday:
A rather cloudy day, with outbreaks of light rain and drizzle, especially at first. Becoming drier into the afternoon, although it will stay cloudy. Turning wet and windy overnight. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Early rain clearing north on Tuesday, with brighter skies and some heavy showers following. Less cold. A mixture of sunshine and some heavy showers Wednesday and Thursday. Rather mild.
